

Origami-inspired 'transformer' robots could help build habitats in space (photo)

By Samantha Mathewson published 2 days ago

Engineers have created a configurable robot that can transform into various structures, which has potential applications for building habitats in space.