

Add Title Here

Add Caption Here

Featured article

The École Polytechnique massacre was an antifeminist mass shooting that occurred on December 6, 1989, at the École Polytechnique in Montreal, Canada. Fourteen women were murdered; another ten women and four men were injured. The perpetrator, Marc Lépine, entered a mechanical engineering class and separated the male and female students, ordering the men to leave. He shot all nine women in the room, killing six. The shooter then at the building, killing eight more women and wounding others. The massacre is considered as

In the news

- Netumbo Nandi-Ndaitwah (pictured) wins the Namibian general election.
- South Korean president Yoon Suk Yeol declares martial law and lifts it hours later after a vote by the National Assembly.
- At least 56 people are killed in a crowd crush during a football match at the Stade du 3 Avril in Nzerékoré,

Netumbo Nandi-Ndaitwah

Star

Large

Width

Star

Wide

Color (b)

Auto

Light

Dark

Add Caption Here